China's Health Ministry said Sunday there are now at least 190 confirmed cases of COVID-19 in the country, up from 158, the highest in two weeks. The health officials said that the number of people affected by the disease is still "low," with only 1,632 cases still under "effective control." At least two people have died from the virus, state-run Xinhua News Agency reported. A woman in Guangdong province fell ill and died after visiting Hubei province, which has seen the majority of cases, according to the Hubei Health Commission. According to Xinhua, an elderly man in Hubei fell ill and died after visiting a nursing home in Jiangsu province. A Chongqing resident in his 50s with a travel history to China's Sichuan province died at a hospital in Chongqing on Saturday, according to Xinhua. The number of people infected in Chongqing is still at eight, the city's health commission said. Another person died of COVID-19 in Shenzhen on Saturday and another one in Zhejiang on Friday. According to the health commission, another 16 cases have been confirmed in Zhejiang, the most in the country so far, and four more in Hainan, home to the tropical Huanan Seafood Market that has been the center of the outbreak. China is the top global producer of the virus and its market intelligence group has forecast that it will pose a challenge to other areas of the global economy. While China has isolated

Specifically, the path is not the shortest between A and C. The path A to B is a different path A to C with the same cost. Sometimes your character may decide to walk to C from B instead of A, or A and B might have a different cost. However, your character will no longer be wandering aimlessly in the middle of the map, and you'll be able to see why it decided that direction instead. I do recommend giving your characters some basic "commands". I recommend this: Turn when adjacent to a point of interest. Turn when short of sight of a point of interest. Search for something when adjacent to a point of interest. Search for something when short of sight of a point of interest. This will help you to build context and at least a rough idea of where to go. You can then continue by providing your character some waypoints (I like the basic concept of "adventure points" in the DMG, it's a great idea). You can even let them teleport from one adventure point to another if they like. If they want to turn around in the middle of the sea, you can have them use a short rest to "refresh" their perception and ask their DM what they see in the world around them - if they can't tell, they don't know what to do. If they are waylaid by a troll, or if they come upon a dark shadow figure, you can use the situations to their advantage.

Amanda Bynes has surrendered on a felony vandalism charge stemming from an incident involving a neighbor who took a photo of Amanda at her home, police sources told TMZ. Amanda, 26, has reportedly avoided potential felony charges by meeting the judge in person and showing up in a regular outfit to court, instead of her customary polka-dot Armani. Police got a search warrant for Amanda's home over the weekend after she allegedly smashed a neighbor's
